

THE POWER OF STORIES, SOCIAL MEDIA, AND SOLIDARITY TO SAVE LIVES

VOLTAIRE TUPAZ, MovePH-Rappler Editor

Online solidarity saves lives

The screenshot shows the Project AGOS website interface. At the top, there are logos for RAPPLER and PROJECT AGOS, along with navigation links for Data, About, and a user profile for RaiMariele. A map of Cainta, Philippines, is visible in the background, with a red location pin marking the site of the rescue. The main content area features a 'Rescue Alert' post from 5 days ago with 2 replies. The post text reads: 'May babaeng nagle-labor sa ibabaw ng bubong. Along Manunggal St., Barangay Tatalon, Quezon City (malapit sa Araneta Avenue.) Please contact Badet, GABRIELA Tatalon, 09325109480. Via @gabrielaphils.' Below the post, there is a 'Reply to this report...' field and a 'Post' button. Two replies are visible: one from Voltaire reporting that Riza Delgado is now in labor at Diosdado Macapagal Elementary School, and another from Voltaire stating that Riza Delgado was rescued by the Philippine Red Cross and transported to East Avenue Medical Center. To the right of the main post, there are several other alert notifications, including one about a woman stuck inside her house and another about a woman in labor in Kamagong St.

The Agos Community of Partners

Project Agos is proud to be working with various government agencies, bilateral and multilateral society organizations, the academe, and private sector to make #ZeroCasualty a reality

MANILA, Philippines - In September 2013, Rappler launched Project Agos, a platform that combines top-down government action with bottom-up civic help communities learn about climate change adaptation and disaster risk (DRR).

The project harnesses technology and social media to ensure critical information reaches those who need it before, during, and after a disaster.

Since then, Project Agos has been working with various government agencies, bilateral and multilateral groups, civil society organizations, the academe, and private sector partners for its various initiatives.

Recently, Rappler and Ateneo de Manila agreed to merge Project Agos with Ateneo's eBayanihan in order to come up with a more robust disaster information management system that taps into the respective strengths and communities of both platforms.

Visit rappler.com/projectagos for updates on this merger.
